HIKING

Pine Creek Nature Trail

This 1.2 mile trail winds its way along Pine Creek, traversing several boulder ridges, through the foothills of the Wasatch Mountains. A variety of plants can be seen along this trail as well as an abundance of wildlife. A trail guide that identifies plants, wildlife, and geologic formations along the trail is available from the state park visitor center. This trail climbs just over 200 feet in elevation and is accessible from the campground, making it a perfect walk for campers spending a weekend in the park. Several short trails spur off the Pine Creek trail to make a loop across the creek on the return hike. This well-maintained trail requires a small day-use fee; parking and restrooms are available.

Wasatch Visitor Center Trail

This primitive trail climbs through oak and maples, making for a stunning fall hike when the colors along these foothills come alive. The trail ascends to the ridgeline where scenic views overlook Midway and the park golf course. Although the loop is only three miles, the hike is considered moderate to difficult due to a significant climb in elevation. Wildlife is common in this area and remember, moose always have the right-of-way! The trail is located adjacent to the WMSP Visitor Center, stop in for directions.

Snake Creek Canyon

Experienced hikers will enjoy exploring miles of trails in Snake Creek Canyon, through scenic forests and lush vegetation, overlooking Heber Valley. A few high elevation trails continue to the ridge, crossing onto the Uinta National Forest and accessing the Great Western Trail. The best way to experience Snake Creek Canyon is to spend a day exploring. Most trails are unmarked and may require some route-finding, but the scenery is well worth it. Although these trails are unmaintained, heavy use by hikers, horseback riders, and mountain bikers make many of them easy to follow. Trailhead access along Snake Creek road may be limited; check in at the WMSP Visitor Center for more details. To reach Snake Creek Canyon, turn left at the park visitor center and follow the road past the golf course into the canyon.

Sage Loop

The sage loop trail is accessed from Dutch Canyon, off of North River Road in Midway. Drive down the dirt access road into the canyon about one mile to a grassy area on the right. Park and hike up the road until a sign directs you to the right on the trail. When the trail crests the ridge and enters a meadow, take the right fork down through the meadow. Bear right at the bottom of the canyon, where a double track will return you to your vehicle. Distance is about 3 miles. Difficulty is easy. The trail offers views of Heber Valley and wildlife. Be sure to take plenty of water.

Cascade Springs Nature Trail

This short walk through Cascade Springs is only one-half mile, but its scenic beauty and improved trails make it enjoyable for families and hikers of all ages. The trails wrap around the natural springs and their streams and waterfalls, with bridges, boardwalks, and paved pathways. The springs cascade down the mountain slope over a series of limestone terraces and pools. Crystal clear waters make it easy to spot trout that inhabit these pools. Signs along the pathways explain the geology of this small natural wonder. To visit Cascade Springs from Midway, take the Cummings Parkway dirt road over the ridge through Wasatch State Park. Or take US Hwy 189 southwest of Heber to the Sundance turnoff, State Route 92. Follow this road to the turnoff for Cascade Springs. For an enjoyable day outing, take State Route 92 to the springs and return to Heber Valley over Cummings Parkway. A parking area and restrooms are available at the trailhead.
